En 843, par le traité de Verdun, l'empire franc fut divisé en trois, la Francie occidentale (qui deviendra le royaume de France en 1205), la Francie médiane, du centre de l'Italie à la Frise, et la Francie orientale (communément nommée Germanie, noyau du futur Saint-Empire romain germanique). Le territoire des Pays-Bas actuels faisait partie de la Francie médiane.

Le Bas-Empire constitue avec le Haut-Empire une des deux découpes historiographiques de l'Empire romain dans l'historiographie romaine vue par les historiens français. Ces termes sont des concepts très usuels, mais leurs limites chronologiques respectives ne sont pas fixées de façon unanime. On fixe la plupart du temps cette période entre les années 284 et 476.
