Unconscious thought theory (UTT) posits that the unconscious mind is capable of performing tasks outside of one's awareness, and that unconscious thought (UT) is better at solving complex tasks, where many variables are considered, than conscious thought (CT), but is outperformed by conscious thought in tasks with fewer variables. It was proposed by Ap Dijksterhuis and Loran Nordgren in 2006.

Human connection also requires spaces for people to meet and connect with one another. In the next video, Eric Kleinberg explains how death rates in very similar neighbourhoods varied ten-fold during a drought because some places had a lot more places where people would gather, do things together, get to know one another, and in a time of crisis, look after each other.
